Moreover, games concerning vocabulary, grammar and syntax serve to deepen what they have learned. A big emphasis is put on the correct pronunciation, which is deepened with phonetic exercises and games. The students prepare presentations about self-chosen topics and present them in a plenum in free speech as far as possible. Short tests serve to check the learning progress. A regular and active attendance at the language course is expected. Doing homework and the self-dependent repetition of the learning matter are required.

Summary of Content	A high motivation for learning a foreign language is expected by the course participants. Cultural aspects like the German educational system, some events of German history, the German culture and mentality, the leisure habits and the appropriate behavior at a workplace in a local company represent, besides the teaching of language structures and vocabulary, a central issue. The students acquire an additional language qualification at level A2.1. This represents an important additional qualification for a subsequent professional activity in cooperation with or in German companies.
